ALABAMA STATE UNIVERSITY

General Information

About Alabama State University

Alabama State University (ASU) was founded in 1867, in Marion, Ala., as a school for African-Americans. The school started as the Lincoln Normal School by nine freed slaves now known as the Marion Nine. The Marion Nine are Joey P. Pinch, Thomas Speed, Nicholas Dale, James Childs, Thomas Lee, John Freeman, Nathan Levert, David Harris and Alexander H. Curtis. The co-founders and original trustees, with assistance from Marion community members, raised $500 for land, and on July 18, 1867, filed incorporation papers to establish the Lincoln Normal School at Marion and opened its doors that November to 113 students.

Our 150-year history is a legacy of perseverance, progress and promise. We're proud of our legacy, and we welcome students to dream, to share their unique gifts and talents, and to take pride in knowing they are part of a rich tradition. In 1873, this predecessor of Alabama State University became the nation's first state-sponsored liberal arts institution for the higher education of blacks, beginning ASU's rich history as a "Teacher's College."

Today

Today, ASU is a widely respected, world-class institution of higher learning which welcomes students from all backgrounds. We offer over 60 undergraduate and graduate degree programs, from our historic teacher education program to our new, high-demand programs in health sciences, and microbiology.

The students who attend ASU are as diverse as our academic offerings, with students from more than 40 states and various countries seeking a top-notch education that extends far beyond the walls of a class-room. With a 15 to 1 student-faculty ratio, students receive the personal attention, mentoring, encouragement, and knowledge needed to achieve their dreams.

Location

ASU is located in historic Montgomery, Ala., the birthplace of the modern civil rights movement. ASU offers students the unique opportunity to live, learn and grow in a city rich with culture and history. In fact, some of the most notable figures of the civil rights era – including the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, attorney Fred Gray and the Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth – are counted among ASU’s many distinguished alumni.

The beautiful 172-acre campus features lush landscaping, historic landmarks, and both modern and traditional facilities that pay homage to the University’s proud past and bright future.

The ASU campus is located only a short walk from the state capital, the state government complex and downtown Montgomery, making the downtown business and entertainment district, art galleries, state archives, museums and historical sites readily accessible to students.

Structure and Function of the Board of Trustees

Alabama State University is under the management, control, and maintenance of a Board of Trustees. The Board of Trustees consists of the Governor of Alabama, four members from the state-at-large, and one member from each of the seven congressional districts in the state, except that two are named from the congressional district in which the University is located. The trustees are appointed to twelve-year, staggered terms by the governor, with the advice and consent of the state senate.

By statute, the Board of Trustees meets in February, May, and September. It may also meet at other times on call of the governor. When the Board of Trustees is not in session, its business is transacted by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees. The officers of the Board of Trustees are the governor, who is ex-officio President of the board; the chairman; the vice-chairman; and the secretary, who serves ex-officio and is President of the University.

The Alabama State University Board of Trustees has legal authority, control, and responsibility for governance of the university in the areas of institutional mission, fiscal stability, institutional policy and related foundations and corporate entities that support the institution and its programs.
